

Decision-Support Memo

One decision you've avoided. AI builds the case. You sign.

There's a real business or ministry decision you've been circling for weeks. This week AI writes the decision-support memo — the pros, the cons, the risks, the costs, the timeline laid out cold — and then you decide. You sign it. The memo is the staff work; the call is the command.

THE ACTION

- Name one real decision you've been avoiding.
- Have AI build the memo: pro / con / risk / cost / timeline, each section honest.
- Add what the AI couldn't know — the gut read, the relationships, the conviction.
- Make the decision and sign it (literally write "decided: ____ on ____"). Then move.

THE MEMO SERVES THE DECISION

A perfect memo with no decision attached is just a sophisticated way to keep avoiding the thing. Build it to decide, not to delay.

SCRIPTURE

James 1:8 — "A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways." The memo exists to get you single-minded — clear-eyed about the trade, then committed to the call.
